Alan is a co-founding partner of Kucker & Bruh, LLP. His legal practice is concentrated in commercial and residential real estate law, civil litigation and administrative law. He is a recognized leader in his field and is frequently called upon by other attorneys to lend his expert advice and support.

Alan began his legal career practicing administrative law. Prior to founding K&B Alan was a Senior Supervising Attorney at the agency known as the New York City Conciliation and Appeals Board (CAB) and its successor, the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR). His legal acumen includes an intimate understanding of the rent stabilization law and code, the rent control regulations and administrative proceedings at the DHCR. As an attorney whose practice concentration includes rent regulation and administrative law, Alan's accessibility to clients enables them to be well informed of changes in the law in addition to the current status of their cases.

Alan is a regular contributor to the New York Law Journal, New York Times, Apartment Law Insider and Landlord v. Tenant Reporter. He has appeared on television and on radio as a recognized expert in landlord and tenant law.
